THE CHAIRPERSON

Ian Mann
Chairman, Khulisa Social Solutions

As we reflect on the past year, the NGO sector has faced unprecedented challenges and remarkable opportunities. In this foreword, I would like to share key insights on these developments and how Khulisa has navigated them to continue making a meaningful impact.

The economic uncertainties of the past year have led to decreased donations and grants, intensifying competition for limited funding resources. This has highlighted the need for innovative fundraising strategies and the diversification of income streams to ensure financial sustainability. Adapting to find/deal with/etc? new ways of working, remotely or in hybrid models, has required us that we to ensure operational efficiency and cost-effectiveness in this constantly changing environment.

Additionally, managing staff well-being to avoid excessive stress and preventing burnout has become a critical collaboration and shared vision have been instrumental in achieving our goals.

concern. Navigating our way through increasingly complex regulatory environments and compliance presents significant challenges. It has become imperative that we maintain transparency and accountability in all our operations to build and retain trust with our stakeholders. The digital divide continues to affect our beneficiaries' access to services and resources, hindering our ability to utilize technology to stay relevant and effective.

Responding to shifting political landscapes and policies that impact the NGO sector is an ongoing challenge, particularly with the uncertainty around budgets and funding from our key donor, the Department of Social Development, especially in the Gauteng region. This annual uncertainty as we approach our new financial year has a significant impact on our staff, leading to undesirable resignations and increasing vulnerability. This is particularly concerning given the social justice issues we constantly strive to address, often in polarized environments.

Despite these challenges, our ongoing efforts to build strategic alliances with other NGOs, the government, and the private sector have been a focus of our work. We continue to enhance our efforts to build collaborative projects and share resources to leverage greater impact and strengthen our advocacy power.

A significant achievement over the past year has been the appointment of research psychologists within Khulisa. This addition has enabled us to more effectively measure and communicate our impact to stakeholders, demonstrating a clear return on investment.

Khulisa has demonstrated remarkable resilience and adaptability in navigating the past year's challenges. Our ability to pivot and respond effectively to changing circumstances is a testament to the strength and dedication of our team. Engaging with and empowering the communities we serve remains at the heart of our mission. By listening to and working alongside these communities, we can better address their needs and support their aspirations. Looking ahead, we are committed to building on our achievements and addressing the challenges that lie ahead in the future. Our strategic goals and planned initiatives for the coming year are designed to enhance our impact and drive positive change.

I express my heartfelt gratitude to our dedicated staff members. Your loyalty, hard work, and unwavering commitment have been the backbone of our success. To our generous donors and corporate volunteers, your support and contributions have made a significant difference in advancing our mission. We are deeply grateful for your trust and partnership. Additionally, I extend our sincere thanks to the NGOs with whom we have partnered. Your collaboration and shared vision have been instrumental in achieving our goals.

MESSAGE

FOUNDER & MANAGING DIRECTOR

Lesley Ann van Selm
Founder and Managing Director

I am struck by the resilience and innovation that have defined Khulisa Social Solutions' journey over the past year. Our mission to foster social cohesion and community empowerment has faced significant tests, but it has also seen remarkable triumphs. As we present our annual report, I want to highlight both the challenges we have encountered and the transformative progress we have made.

The NGO sector has been navigating an extraordinarily complex environment. Economic volatility has constrained funding sources, requiring us to be more innovative and resourceful in our fundraising efforts. The ongoing global shift towards remote and hybrid work models has demanded a rethinking of our operational strategies to ensure we maintain our efficiency and effectiveness. At the same time, the well-being of our staff has been a top priority, with initiatives to prevent burnout and support mental health becoming increasingly critical.

In response to these challenges, Khulisa has doubled down on its core strengths: community engagement, evidence-based interventions, and strategic partnerships.

This year, our dialogue circles have continued to be a cornerstone of our approach. Covering topics such as adverse childhood experiences, bullying, children's rights, civic education, crime prevention, grooming a boy child, literacy, peer pressure, people living with disabilities, parenting, prostitution, gender-based violence, voter education, mental health, and youth unemployment. These circles provide safe spaces for open dialogue and collective problem-solving. The impact has been profound, with participants reporting significant improvements in community awareness and understanding, empowerment and advocacy, behavioural change and crime prevention, social cohesion and inclusion, mental health and well-being, youth development and civic engagement, and improved relationships and family dynamics.

Our commitment to data-driven action has never been stronger. We have gathered extensive data from our interventions, allowing us to refine our programs and demonstrate their effectiveness to stakeholders. This evidence-based approach ensures that our work is not only impactful but also scalable and replicable.

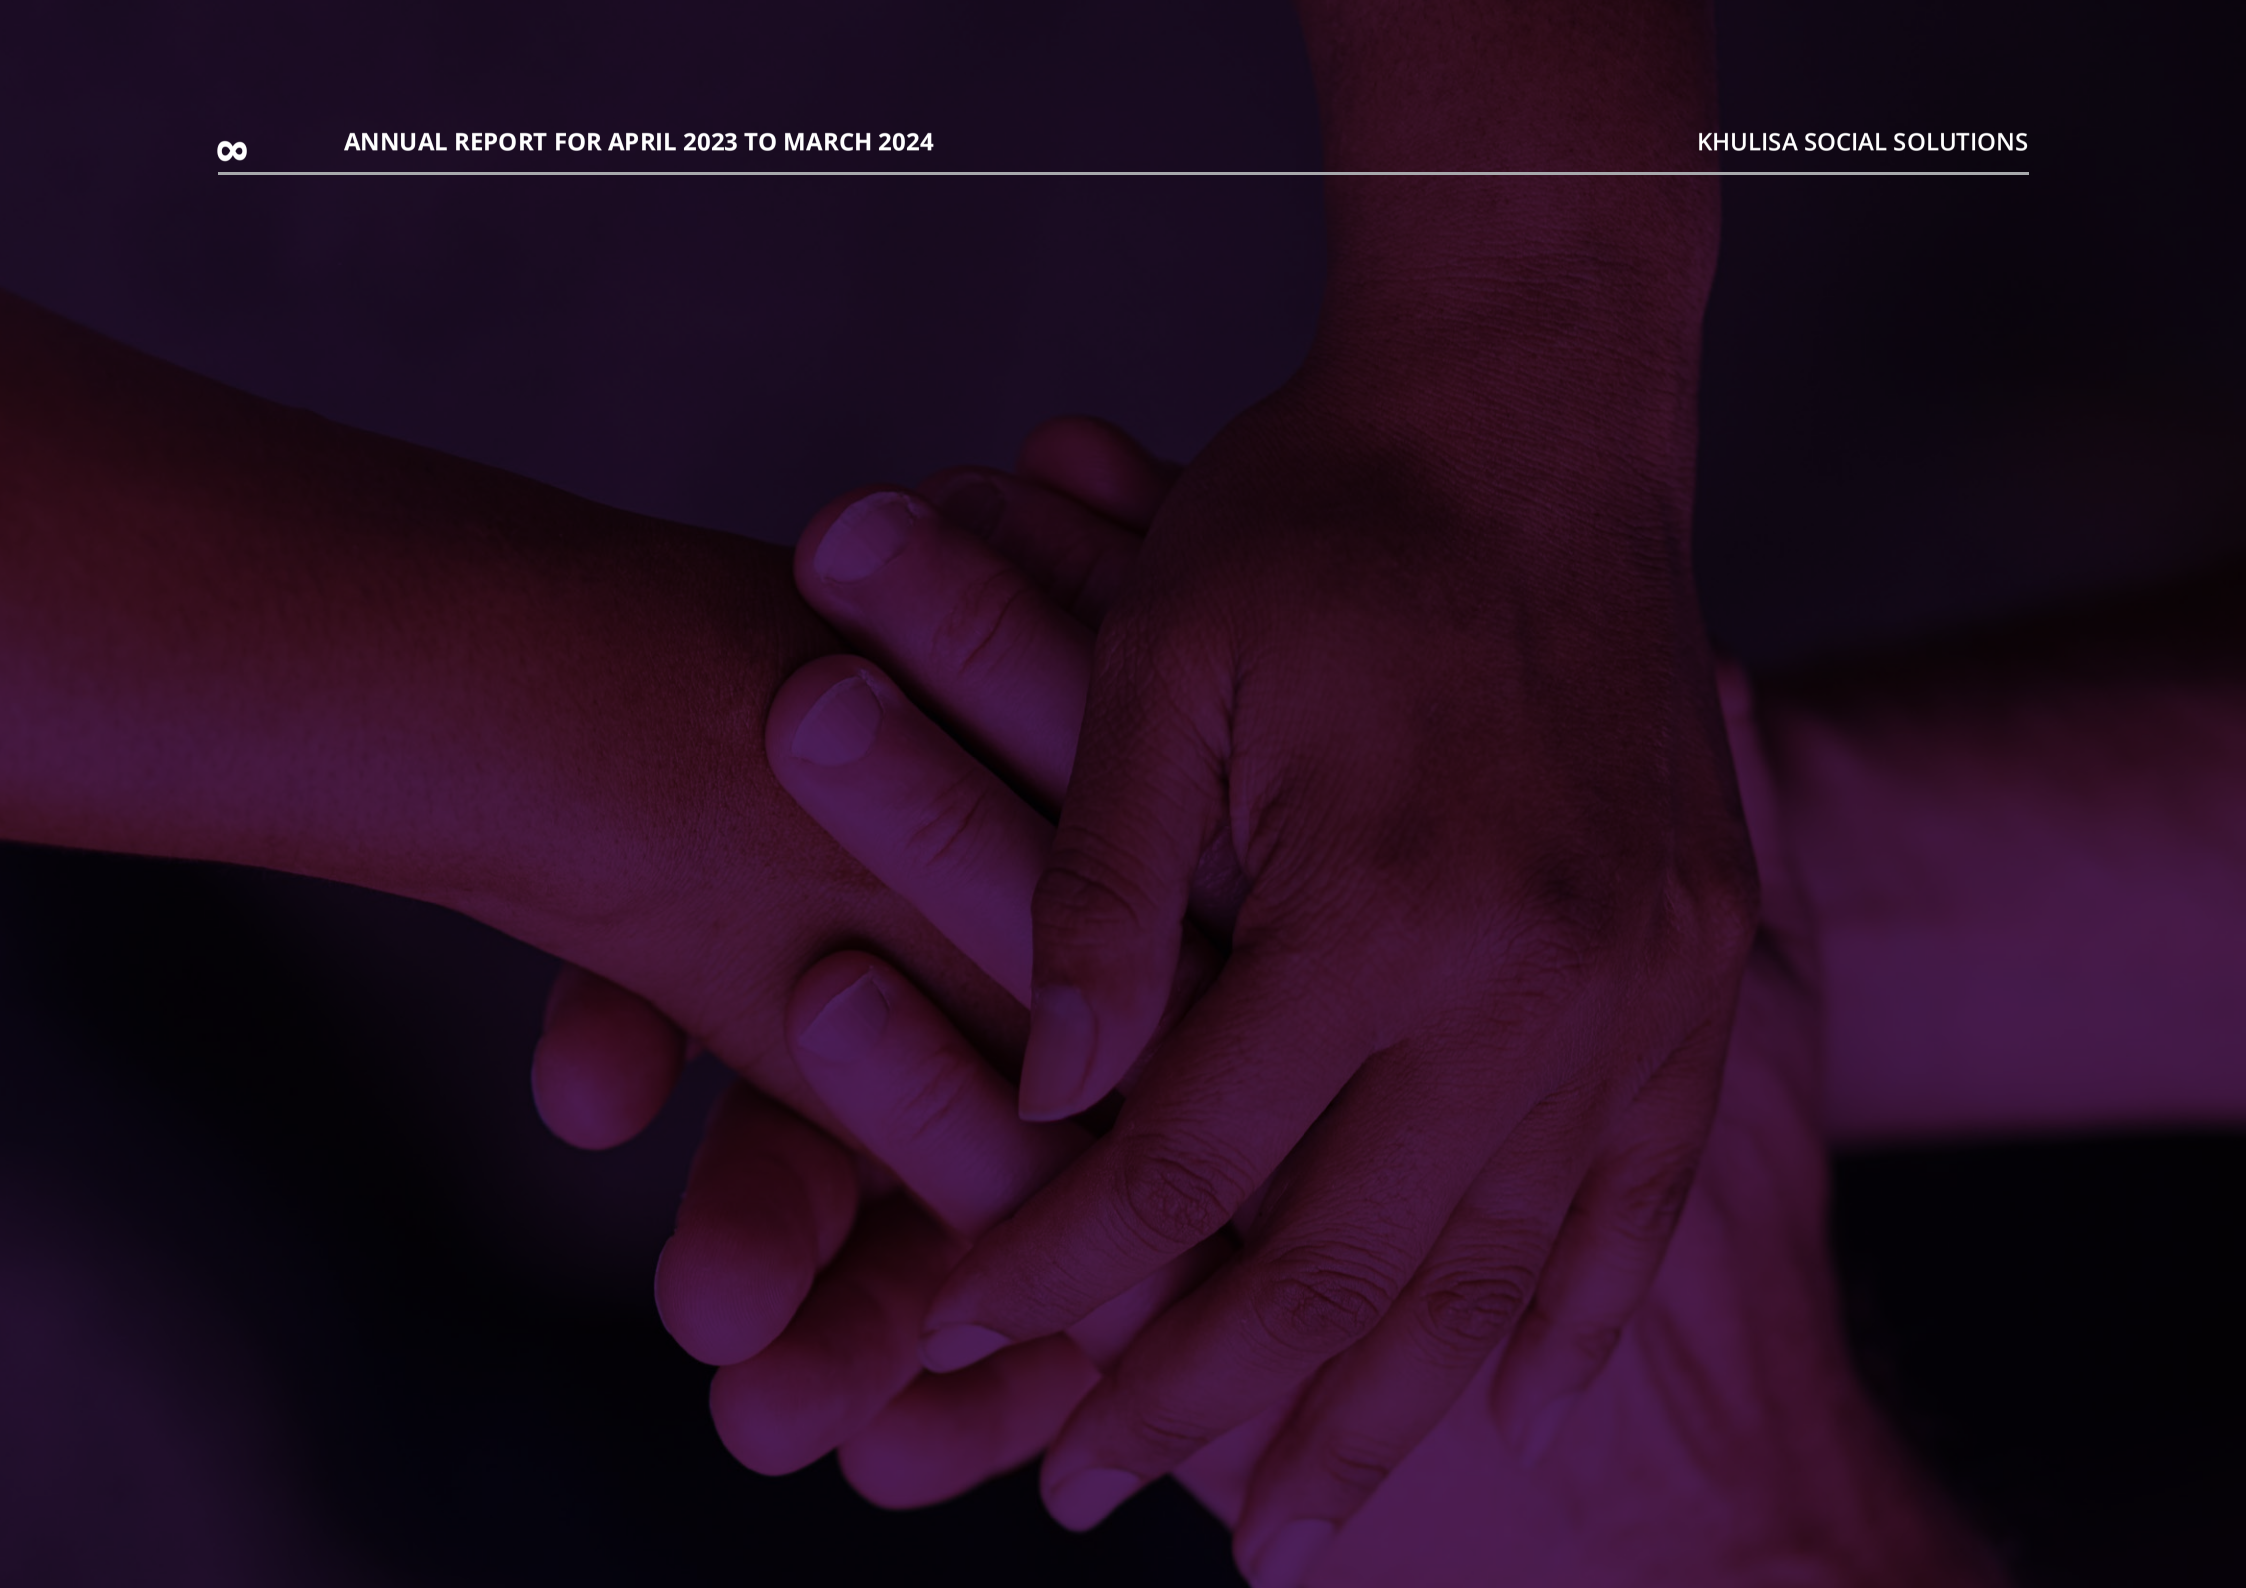

As we look to the future, we are exploring new opportunities for growth and innovation. Our strategic goals for the coming year include expanding our reach into new communities, particularly in underserved rural areas, and leveraging digital platforms to enhance our program delivery. We are also focused on strengthening our advocacy efforts, using our data and insights to influence policy change at local and national levels.

The success of Khulisa is built on the dedication and passion of our team. Our staff members are not just employees; they are changemakers who bring tireless energy, creativity, and compassion to their work every day. To our donors, your generosity has been the lifeblood of our mission. Your trust in our work allows us to continue empowering individuals and transforming communities. To our partners, thank you for your collaboration and shared commitment to social change. Together, we are making a real and lasting impact.

In closing, while the challenges we face are significant, so too are the opportunities. I am filled with optimism and determination as we embark on the next chapter of Khulisa's journey. With the continued support of our partners, donors, and the communities we serve, I am confident that we will continue to drive positive change and build a more just, inclusive, healthy? and equitable society.

I invite you to explore this report and join us in celebrating the milestones we have achieved. Together, we can continue to make a lasting difference in the lives of those who need it most.

Expanded GBV survivor support services, offering counselling, legal assistance, and safe spaces for over 206 survivors, including individuals from the LGBTQI community.

5. Strategic Partnerships

Enhanced partnerships with corporate and government entities, securing roles as implementing partners for several corporate volunteer programs.

STRATEGIC PRIORITIES

A REVIEW OF KHULISA'S GOALS FOR THE NEXT YEAR

Strategic Vision for a Socially Cohesive South Africa

Khulisa envisions a South Africa where all individuals thrive within cohesive, supportive, and resilient communities.

We are committed to overcoming historical injustices and making social cohesion a lived reality, addressing the deep-rooted challenges that hinder social unity and driving initiatives that impact lives across all levels of society.Despite progress since apartheid, remnants of these systems manifest as economic disparities, social unrest, and distrust in governance.

Khulisa's 27-year legacy inspires us to view this history as a call to action, building stronger, more united communities.

Strategic Pillars

Empowering Communities Through Collaboration

Change happens at the grassroots level, where communities identify and solve their unique challenges. By fostering collaboration among community members, NGOs, local governments, and businesses, we aim to build bridges that empower communities to shape their futures.

Scaling Up for Greater Impact

With successful programs that have touched tens of thousands of lives, we aim to expand our reach to more communities.

By leveraging our experience and partnerships, we strive to ensure no community is left behind, amplifying our impact on a larger scale.

Change happens at the grassroots level.

Addressing Social Cohesion Holistically

Social cohesion is a dynamic process shaped by community interactions, societal structures, interpersonal relationships, and individual attitudes. By focusing on strengthening community dynamics where unity is directly experienced, our ecological approach integrates broader societal and individual layers, fostering unity and resilience from the ground up.

Aligning with Global Goals for Sustainable Development

Khulisa's work aligns with several United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and South African policies:

SDGs Covered:

SDG 1: No Poverty

SDG 3: Good Health and Well-being

SDG 4: Quality Education

SDG 5: Gender Equality

SDG 8: Decent Work and Economic Growth

SDG 10: Reduced Inequalities

SDG 11: Sustainable Cities and Communities

REFLECTING 27 YEARS

HISTORY OF KHULISA SOCIAL SOLUTIONS

Khulisa Social Solutions was founded in 1997 by founder and Managing Director Lesley Ann Van Selm in response to the deep-rooted inequalities and social challenges that South Africa faced in the post-apartheid era. The organization was born out of a profound commitment to addressing the systemic issues that marginalized communities experienced, particularly focusing on youth and those affected by crime, poverty, and social exclusion.

Early Beginnings (1997-2000)

Khulisa's journey began with a focus on restorative justice and offender rehabilitation. Inspired by 12 years of documenting Indigenous stories narrated by the acclaimed historian Credo Mutwa, Lesley introduced South Africa's first-ever therapeutic rehabilitation program for juvenile offenders. This pioneering approach sought to heal and reintegrate young offenders back into society, breaking the cycle of crime and offering them a second chance.

Expanding Focus and Impact (2000-2010)

As Khulisa grew, so did its scope of work. By the early 2000s, the organization expanded its focus to include broader social issues such as education, substance abuse prevention and community development. Khulisa began implementing programs aimed at youth development, life skills training, and community empowerment. These programs were designed to tackle the root causes of crime and social dysfunction by providing individuals with the tools and support needed to lead positive, productive lives.

During this period, Khulisa also began to form strategic partnerships with government agencies, and corporate sponsors, together with other NGOs, allowing the organization to scale its operations and reach more communities across South Africa. These partnerships were crucial in enabling Khulisa to sustain and expand its programs, making a tangible difference in the lives of thousands.

Strategic Realignment and Innovation (2010–2020)

In the following decade, Khulisa continued to evolve, aligning its strategies to address emerging social challenges. The organization shifted towards a more holistic approach, integrating social cohesion, peace-making, and NGO capacity building into its core activities. Khulisa recognized the importance of not just addressing individual needs but also fostering strong, resilient communities.

Current Era and Global Reach (2020–Present)

In recent years, Khulisa has further solidified its role as a leader in social development, both within South Africa and beyond.

One of the key innovations during this period was the introduction of social cohesion programs, which focused on bridging divides within communities, promoting dialogue, and reducing violence. Khulisa's work in this area has become increasingly recognized, especially in regions marked by high levels of social fragmentation and conflict.

One of the key innovations during this period was the introduction of social cohesion programs

Throughout our history, Khulisa has remained true to its founding vision: to create opportunities for the most vulnerable and marginalized to thrive.

From our early days focusing on juvenile offender rehabilitation to its current role as a multifaceted social solutions provider, Khulisa has continuously adapted and evolved, responding to the changing needs of the communities it serves.

OUR STORY OF THE YEAR

FROM CONFLICT TO COLLABORATION

How Alexandra's NGOs are Transforming Their Community Through Unity and Innovation

In the heart of Alexandra, one of South Africa's oldest and most vibrant townships, a remarkable transformation is taking place. Long characterized by its resilience but also challenged by poverty, unemployment, crime, and social fragmentation, Alexandra is now witnessing a new era of unity and progress. Over the past two and a half years, a coalition of 17 local NGOs, empowered by the capacity-building efforts of Khulisa Social Solutions, has emerged as a formidable force for social cohesion. Through dedication, collaboration, and strategic capacity building, these NGOs are not just addressing immediate needs—they are reshaping the entire ecosystem of Alexandra, laying the foundation for sustainable, long-term change.

THE SEEDS OF CHANGE

The Alexandra Peace-making Project

The journey began with the Alexandra Peace-making Project in 2001, an initiative aimed at addressing the high levels of crime and violence tearing at the social fabric of the community. This project united a diverse group of NGOs, each with a unique mission but sharing a common goal: to create a peaceful and cohesive society where every individual can thrive. Through dialogue circles, community outreach, and targeted interventions, these NGOs laid the groundwork for a new era of social cohesion in Alexandra.

Building Capacity, Building Strength

The initial success of the Peace-making Project revealed a deeper need: for these NGOs to sustain and scale their impact, they needed to enhance their capacity. Recognizing this, Khulisa Social Solutions stepped in with a comprehensive capacity-building program launched in 2022. The program provided training in governance, financial management, project management, and community engagement, equipping the NGOs with the skills and knowledge necessary for effective and sustainable operations. This training went beyond organizational development; it empowered NGOs to collaborate more effectively. By fostering a culture of partnership and mutual support, Khulisa helped these organizations break down silos and work together in a coordinated manner. This collaboration has been pivotal, enabling them to pool resources, share expertise, and avoid duplication of efforts.

A Formidable Force for Social Cohesion

As these NGOs have grown in capacity, so has their impact. Together, they have created a powerful ecosystem of activities that address the diverse needs of the Alexandra community. From environmental initiatives like recycling and Jukskei River cleaning to education programs covering tutoring, public speaking, fashion design, and life skills training, these NGOs touch every aspect of community life. Their efforts in sustainable livelihoods—through soup kitchens, gardening, and agriculture—are providing not only food but also a sense of purpose and dignity to those in need.

Awareness programs on substance use, HIV/TB, and mental wellness are helping to heal the community from within. Through arts, crafts, sports, and other creative expressions, they are giving the youth of Alexandra a platform to shine and a reason to hope.

Changing the Ecosystem, One Step at a Time

The collective impact of these NGOs is nothing short of transformative. They have become the backbone for social cohesion in Alexandra, creating a ripple effect that is changing the community from the ground up. By addressing the root causes of social fragmentation, they are helping build a more resilient and united community. As they continue to grow in strength and reach, their potential to change the ecosystem of Alexandra –and beyond– is limitless.

KEY ACHIEVEMENTS: MEASURABLE IMPACT

Through Khulisa's capacity-building program, local NGOs have achieved remarkable results:

reported improved stakeholder relationships, strengthening ties with community members, government, and the private sector.

87%

of NGOs implemented conflict resolution training, reducing internal conflicts and enhancing community peacebuilding.

82%

saw significant improvements in internal staff skills, driving greater operational efficiency and creativity of NGOs have expanded their services or programs, reaching more community members.

73%

67%

adopted mediation services, helping to resolve community disputes more effectively.

67%

developed new partnerships, creating a robust network of support and resource-sharing within Alexandra.

60%

engaged in capacity-building workshops, leading to more strategic and efficient operations.

27%

increased their funding, enhancing impact and sustainability.

THE POWER OF DIALOGUE:

The Alex Peace-making Project

Central to this initiative is the Alex Peacemaking Project, which focuses on fostering peace and understanding within the community through dialogue circles.

These facilitated discussions bring together community members from diverse backgrounds to share experiences, listen to one another, and work toward common goals.

Through 119 dialogue circles, approximately 917 individuals have engaged in building trust, resolving conflicts, and promoting collaboration, proving vital in addressing local tensions and promoting peace.

119 dialogue circles, approximately 917 individuals have engaged in building trust.

EXPANDING REACH AND ACTIVITIES

The NGOs in Alexandra have expanded their impact through various activities:

Environmental Projects
Community clean-ups, recycling initiatives, and gardening projects address local environmental concerns like water pollution in the Jukskei River.

Education Programs
Life skills training, music lessons, and youth mentorship programs empower the next generation.

Sustainable Livelihoods
Soup kitchens, urban farming, and vocational training support local economic development.

Health and Wellness Campaigns
Substance abuse prevention, HIV/TB awareness, and mental health support programs promote overall community well-being.

Creative and Recreational Activities
Arts, sports, and cultural events provide safe spaces for expression and personal development.

CASE STUDIES

THREE NGO PARTNERS

▲ Chris Ndlovu from Thusong Youth Centre

CASE STUDY 1: THUSONG YOUTH CENTRE

Overview

Mr. Chris Ndlovu began his journey at Thusong Youth Centre as a volunteer after being retrenched. Recognizing his passion and dedication, the community asked him to step up as an organizer, and he embraced this role wholeheartedly. His aim was clear: engage the youth in meaningful activities that would keep them away from negative influences like crime. Chris initiated various programs, such as dance, drama, music, and debates, to attract young people to the centre.

As participation grew, he expanded the offerings to include fitness classes, aerobics, dialogue circles, and a Parolees Project that provides community service opportunities and rehabilitation support.

Challenges and Successes

Established in 1979, Thusong Youth Centre has faced numerous challenges, particularly as the population of Alexandra has surged to nearly a million people.

Chris recounts a particularly poignant success story of two young boys, immigrants from Zimbabwe, who were unable to attend school while waiting for their papers. Initially reluctant to accept help due to fear of xenophobia, the family eventually trusted Thusong. Unfortunately, during this time, the youngest boy fell ill and passed away due to a lack of medical care—a tragedy that still weighs heavily on Chris. However, through Thusong's support, the family secured work visas and counseling, showing the Centre's commitment to serving the community without judgment.

Current Needs

Despite the successes, the Centre is in desperate need of financial support.

The facilities are in disrepair– unreliable electricity, broken windows, damaged doors, and peeling paint are just a few of the challenges. Though Thusong currently serves around 300 direct beneficiaries and collaborates with multiple NGOs, it relies entirely on volunteers. Chris, who does not receive a salary, dreams of employing staff full-time to further expand their impact. He believes that with proper funding, Thusong can continue to serve as a lifeline for the youth and the broader community of Alexandra.

Vision for the Future

Chris is driven by his passion for community development and sees endless potential in the youth of Alexandra. With adequate support, he hopes to not only sustain but also grow the Centre's programs, providing more opportunities for young people to build self-respect and valuable life skills. "We've built a life-raft in the stormy sea of Alexandra township," Chris says, "now we need some help to get it to shore."

CASE STUDY 2: EAGLES OF HOPE

Overview

Mandla Mnisi, born and raised in Alexandra, turned his life around after serving ten years of a fifteen-year prison sentence. Returning to a community that rejected him, Mandla nearly reoffended but instead chose a different path—he founded Eagles of Hope. Through this NGO, he connected with Khulisa's Lesley Ann Van Selm, who provided training in mediation and restorative justice. Using these skills, Mandla reconciled with his family and began helping others do the same. Today, Eagles of Hope supports 120 youth, aged 8 to 21, and 97 elderly and formerly incarcerated individuals.

▼ Mandla Mnisi

Challenges and Successes

The path has not been easy. Mandla had to sever ties with people from his past, including his own brother, to create a safer environment for himself and others committed to change. He turned his house into a safe space for those newly released from prison with nowhere else to go. Understanding the challenge of finding employment with a criminal record, Mandla started a skills transaction program. They now have successful initiatives in sewing and carpentry, providing participants a chance to make a living. "We come from prison with different skills," he explains, "but because the certificate comes from correctional services, we can't use them. So, we're creating our own opportunities."

Current Needs

While Eagles of Hope is making progress, Mandla acknowledges the need for resources. "We need a little help, you know? A helping hand can make the impossible possible," he says. The organization has also partnered with Google to train members in cyber security, adding valuable skills like plumbing and electrical work to their programs. However, the criminal records of participants still present barriers to traditional employment.

To counter this, Mandla encourages self-employment, using their skills to make products like furniture and clothing, which are already gaining traction.

Vision for the Future

Looking ahead, Mandla is excited about new projects, including a "Take a Boy Child to Prison" initiative to deter youth from crime by showing them the harsh realities of prison life. With more community members seeking his advice, Mandla is hopeful about Eagles of Hope's impact. "We're teaching the youth to care for themselves and others. With a little more support, we can do even more to break the cycle of reoffending," he concludes, his voice filled with hope and determination.

CASE STUDY 3: A REKGANYENG LESEDING DEVELOPMENT INITIATIVES

Overview

Katlego "Coach Kat" Matlala, along with his father Janky and brother Karabo, runs A Rekganyeng Leseding Development Initiatives, an NGO founded in 2013 to address gender-based violence, skills development, and environmental degradation in Alexandra. Janky, the founder, started this organization to improve the quality of life in Ward 105 and surrounding areas through community engagement and practical solutions.

Challenges and Successes

One of their proudest achievements is stopping illegal dumping in the Jukskei River, a waterway vital to the community's spiritual and physical well-being.

"The river was so polluted that it was narrowed to the point you could almost put your phone across it," Janky explains. Through dialogue circles and community spirit, they transformed the area, turning local residents into 'River Entrepreneurs' who take responsibility for maintaining and protecting the riverbanks. This initiative has not only improved environmental conditions but also fostered a stronger sense of community ownership.

Current Needs

Despite these successes, the organization faces significant challenges. Janky notes that while they have made strides without any government help, sustaining their efforts requires more resources. "We want clean water, not just for us but for everyone downstream," he states. The Matlala family also runs youth programs that provide homework assistance, sports, and mentorship, keeping young people engaged and away from negative influences. Coach Kat highlights that these efforts help youths avoid trouble and build a brighter future.

Vision for the Future

Looking ahead, Junky has big dreams for A Rekganyeng. "I want to see our organization become the biggest ever in terms of waste management," he says.

His goal is for the Jukskei River to be clean and usable for everyone, demonstrating the power of community-driven solutions. As they continue to grow, Janky, Coach Kat, and Karabo are eager to expand their programs, attract more volunteers, and make an even more significant impact in Alexandra. "We have work to do," Janky concludes, his resolve unwavering.

FROM OUR REGIONS

STORIES OF TRANSFORMATION

These success stories underscore the transformative power of targeted interventions, highlighting how individuals and communities can overcome deep-seated challenges with the right support and guidance. The names of the individuals have been changed to protect their identity.

GAUTENG – EKANGALA

Thuli's Story

Thuli, a 21-year-old woman from Ekangala, grew up in a challenging environment. At the age of 8, she began to experience repeated sexual abuse from her uncle, neighbours, and other community members, which continued for years. Raised by her grandmother while her mother worked long hours in Pretoria, Thuli never felt she could speak out about her abuse. Without a support system, she developed severe behavioural problems, including substance abuse (rock and crystal meth), aggressive behaviour, disappearing for weeks, and dropping out of school. Her relationship with her family deteriorated as her behaviour worsened.

Referred by the Ekangala Magistrates Court and the Mali Martin Polokekgong Center, Thuli came to Khulisa Social Solutions at 17, at a critical point in her life. She participated in the "Silence the Violence" program, where she learned to understand and address the different aspects of violence, her "Dark Side" (feelings of superiority and aggression), and her "Best Possible Self" (the version of herself she could be when truly happy and healed).

Through group therapy, drama therapy, and positive journaling, Thuli shared her story and confronted her trauma. She explored the impact of generational cycles of violence, discovering that both her grandmother and mother had been victims of sexual abuse as well.

With ongoing support from Khulisa, Thuli gradually stopped using substances and began to rebuild her life. She learned to forgive her abusers and make amends with her family, understanding how her actions and unresolved trauma had affected them. Thuli went back to school, successfully obtained her matric certificate, and started focusing on her future with hope and determination. Her journey illustrates the power of resilience and the impact of dedicated intervention programs in breaking cycles of violence and trauma.

Her journey illustrates the power of resilience and the impact of dedicated intervention programs

Karabo's Story - Rustenburg, North West

Karabo, a 49-year-old woman from Rustenburg, grew up in an environment steeped in abuse and neglect. Her mother, who had been abandoned and raised by a relative, endured severe physical, emotional, and verbal abuse, which set a pattern for Karabo's own life. When Karabo's mother abandoned her children, Karabo and her siblings faced neglect and harsh living conditions. Determined to find their mother, Karabo led her siblings to Rustenburg, only to experience further abuse upon reuniting with her.

In her quest for stability and a sense of belonging, Karabo married young. However, instead of the security she sought, her marriage brought more emotional abuse, eventually leading to a divorce after she had two children. Hoping for a better future, she remarried and had a third child. Her second husband passed away when their youngest daughter was two years old, leaving Karabo to navigate life's challenges alone once more.

The death of her husband was a significant turning point. It intensified the emotional strain on the family, and conflicts became frequent. Karabo struggled to provide stability while dealing with her own grief, leading to growing tensions among her children. Without a strong support system, her children began to exhibit problematic behavior and developed conflicts among themselves. The persistent stress took a toll on Karabo's health, culminating in a stroke that affected her physical abilities and left her partially paralyzed. This made her recovery even more difficult, as she now had to manage her health along with her children's escalating issues.

As the years passed, her youngest daughter, now a teenager, began displaying concerning behaviors like skipping school, drinking, and smoking. The difficult home environment, marked by Karabo's health challenges and ongoing conflicts, contributed to these behaviors. Karabo, overwhelmed by her struggles, started using alcohol as a coping mechanism, which further strained her relationship with her children and created a vicious cycle of tension and conflict.Realizing the need for external support, Karabo was referred to Khulisa Social Solutions by the Mphatlalatsane Disability Centre. She was enrolled in Khulisa's "Breakthrough" program, which focuses on life skills development, self-esteem building, and conflict resolution. The program provided a lifeline for Karabo.

She learned to develop a positive self-concept, understand her trauma, and rebuild her relationship with her children. The program also provided individual and group counseling sessions that helped Karabo recognize the impact of her alcohol dependency and motivated her to seek healthier coping mechanisms.

Simultaneously, her youngest daughter was transferred to Herman Thebe High School. At first, she struggled to adjust, displaying resistance and continuing with her disruptive behaviors. However, with consistent efforts from Khulisa's social workers, who worked closely with the Department of Education, and regular follow-ups, the daughter gradually adapted to her new environment. She began to focus on her academics and reduced her harmful habits.

The combined support of the school, social workers, and Khulisa helped create a more positive trajectory for her future. Through Khulisa's support, Karabo began to overcome her emotional challenges. She reduced her reliance on alcohol as a coping mechanism and worked toward fostering a healthier home environment.

The program's holistic approach– addressing both personal and family dynamics– proved to be essential in Karabo's journey of recovery. Her story is one of perseverance, resilience, and the power of community-based intervention programs to create meaningful change.

SOMERSET WEST

Neighbour Conflict Resolution

In July 2024, a conflict erupted between two neighbors in the Nomzamo community of Somerset West over missing furniture.

The applicant had asked the respondent to keep her furniture while her house was undergoing renovations. When she tried to retrieve it, the respondent acted as if she didn't know about the furniture and began showing hostility by refusing to greet her, throwing dirty water into her yard, and making accusations of witch-craft. The situation escalated to the point where the applicant approached the street committee for help, but the respondent refused to cooperate.

mediator effectively set boundaries and guided them to focus on resolution rather than blame

The unresolved conflict led the applicant to seek help from the police, who could not assist, and she ultimately opened an interdict against the respondent at the Strand court. Both parties were then referred to Khulisa for mediation. During mediation, each party was allowed to present their side of the story. The session initially turned into a heated argument, but the mediator effectively set boundaries and guided them to focus on resolution rather than blame.

Through the mediation process, both parties agreed to listen to each other and work toward a peaceful resolution. They reached an agreement to withdraw the matter and cease all hostilities. A follow-up call three weeks later revealed that the situation had significantly improved, with both neighbors now speaking to each other and the respondent stopping the negative behaviour. This story demonstrates the effectiveness of mediation (i.e., restorative justice) in resolving conflicts that have escalated to involve conventional legal interventions.

While this case might demonstrate that restorative measures like mediation can work where conventional interventions (such as police involvement) did not, it is important to note that at no point does it seem that the matter was referred to law or traditional authorities beyond the police and court system.

The story underscores the need to be cautious about how we present restorative justice as an alternative to traditional law, conventional legal systems, or the engagement of lawyers. Instead, it should be framed as a complementary approach that can be effective in resolving conflicts that have already escalated to involve formal legal interventions.

Taryn Faro

Taryn, a mother of four from Parow, has her eyes set on the future –a future she had lost sight of after the death of her spouse left her un-homed. As she'll tell you herself, Taryn isn't a person of many words, but when she speaks of her future, she speaks with conviction: "I've been working on myself a lot since I've been here," she explains of her journey with the Matrix model of addiction treatment and personal counselling.

"I've grown a lot here at Streetscapes, from not knowing where I was going to. I know now where I want to go to and what I want to do for the future and for my kids. I'm now renting on my own," she shares, noting her determination to reunite her family.

Taryn has found valuable work at the eco-friendly LaundReCycle. "It's water and energy efficient laundry," she explains.

This resource efficient social enterprise caters to residents, businesses, and the un-homed community and Taryn has earned a reputation for her work. "People say that I do a great job," Taryn adds. LaundRe-Cycle, launched in January 2021, is part of a three-year research project conducted by the Zurich University of Applied Sciences in Switzerland and Water Rescue in Paarl. It uses a natural and resource efficient closed-cycle water treatment process, with water losses replaced by rainwater. The entire system is powered by off-grid solar power.

For Taryn, Streetscapes provided the support, but it's her own hard work and dedication that are truly making a difference. "I've seen changes in myself since working in the laundry the past year. I'm handling it very well," she says.

Building NGO Capacity and Empowering Communities: Khulisa Social Solutions' Transformative Work in Danielskuil and Postmasburg

Since October 2023, Khulisa Social Solutions has been actively working in Danielskuil and Postmasburg in the Northern Cape, focusing on capacitating four local NGOs; Saving Lives Danielskuil, Kgatelopele Youth Development Forum, Blessed Is the Hand that Gives, and Tsantsabane Skills Development Centre. This initiative, launched in partnership with Knowledge Pele, and funded by the Peace Humans Trust aims to equip these NGOs with essential skills, enabling them to become more effective, sustainable, and capable of driving positive change in their communities.

The capacitation program covers various training modules, such as strategic planning, compliance, monitoring and evaluation, data collection, proposal writing, budgeting, leadership, and restorative justice. These sessions empower the NGOs to operate more efficiently and eventually become capacitors themselves.

Transformative Transect Walk Training Program

A standout component of Khulisa's efforts is the Transect Walk Training program held on January 30th and 31st, 2024.

This initiative involves community members and NGOs in gathering data to map out opportunities for employment and enterprise within their regions.

This program not only uplifts individuals but also contributes to the community's overall development.

The training empowers participants to take ownership of their community development by equipping them with data collection, mapping, and analysis skills, fostering local leadership and collaboration.

Lesley Ann Van Selm, Managing Director and Founder of Khulisa, remarked, "By placing tools and knowledge in the hands of the community, we enable them to identify opportunities for employment and enterprise within their neighborhoods. This program not only uplifts individuals but also contributes to the community's overall development."

Building Resilient Communities through Asset-Based Development

The two-day training program also introduced participants to the Asset-Based Community Development (ABCD) model, promoting community-driven development by leveraging local assets and resources. Participants engaged in discussions on resilience, community mapping, and planning their own transect walks, which involve observing and analyzing environmental and social resources. These walks will help identify relationships and opportunities within the community, providing valuable insights for future development initiatives.

Feedback and Impact

Feedback from participants has been overwhelmingly positive, highlighting the program's practical applications and its focus on community assets. One participant noted, "The training was informative and engaging, providing us with valuable tools to support our community."

A Holistic Approach to Social Challenges

Khulisa's capacity-building initiatives in the Northern Cape address key social challenges like unemployment, substance abuse, and community disengagement.

By empowering local NGOs and community members, Khulisa fosters a proactive approach to sustainable development and social cohesion, sowing the seeds of lasting positive change across Tsantsabane and Kgatelopele.

HORISON GAZETTE 2 FEBRUARY 2024

KHULISA TRANSECT WALK TRAINING, EMPOWERS COMMUNITY MEMBERS AND NGO'S IN DANIELSKUIL AND POSTMASBURG

30/31 January 2024: Danielskuil: Khulisa Social Solutions, a leading social impact NGO, was proud to announce its collaboration with community members and NGOs from Danielskuil and Postmasburg in a transformative transect walk training program. The initiative was aimed at empowering participants to take ownership of gathering community data, ultimately mapping out opportunities for employment and enterprise within the region.

The transect walk training program, a flagship initiative of Khulisa, focuses on equipping individuals with the necessary skills to collect accurate and valuable data from their communities. By engaging community members and NGOs in this process, the program not only fosters a sense of ownership but also enables them to identify and capitalize on potential avenues for employment and enterprise.

"We are thrilled to collaborate with the community members and NGOs from Danielskuil and Postmasburg in this empowering transect walk training program," says Managing Director and Founder of Khulisa, Lesley Ann Van Selm. "By placing the tools and knowledge in the hands of the community, we believe that they are best suited to identify opportunities for employment and enterprise within their own neighbourhoods. This program not only uplifts individuals but also contributes to the overall development of the community." Data collected during the program will be carefully analysed by Khulisa's team of experts, who will work closely with the participants to identify viable avenues for employment and enterprise. This collaborative approach ensures that the community's voice is central to the decision-making process and that the final outcomes are tailored to meet their specific needs and aspirations.

The organisation expressed its gratitude to all the participants, community members, and NGOs for their commitment and enthusiasm towards creating positive change within their communities. They acknowledge the invaluable support of its partners and the donor of the program, The Peace Humanitus Trust, whose contributions have made this initiative possible.

During the first day of the training, participants were divided into three groups to focus on key aspects of building resilient communities. Through engaging discussions, they gained a deep understanding of resilience, identified community assets, and explored participatory action research. These sessions were designed to foster knowledge of the ABCD model and its application in community development. On the second day, participants were equipped with the necessary tools and knowledge to plan their own Transect Walks. These walks involve observing environmental and social resources while moving between two points within a community. The Transect Walks will take place in Postmasburg, allowing participants to apply their knowledge and mapping skills to identify relationships between groups, individuals, and communities. The results of these walks will be presented to the community in March, promoting a deeper understanding of the community's strengths and areas for improvement.

The Transect Walk methodology can be applied across different project phases. During the assessment phase, it helps uncover hidden patterns within a community. In the planning phase, it directs attention towards community assets and livelihood activities. In the implementation and monitoring phase, it guides participants to appropriate locations and resources. The evaluation phase utilizes the walk to identify changes and progress, while in the reporting phase, the walk serves as a report for wider community engagement.

Some participant feedback recalled as follows: "The training was informative and engaging, providing us with valuable tools to support our community." - Participant A

"I appreciated the focus on community assets and the practical application of the Transect Walk methodology." - Participant B

"This training has empowered us to take a proactive role in our community's development." - Participant C

Khulisa Social Solutions, established 27 years ago, is a leading social impact organization dedicated to creating sustainable change in communities through running inspired initiatives. This non-profit company (NPC) helps vulnerable children, youth and communities unlock their potential and develop skills toward a sustainable future. It operates nationally, employs over 200 staff through 19 offices, and works in approximately 190 communities in collaboration with 350 NGO partners, impacting the lives of close to 200,000 people per annum.

The NPC partners with national and local government departments, schools, correctional facilities, community leaders, corporates, thought leaders, academic institutions, and private companies. Khulisa's internationally acclaimed and locally rewarded best practice programs deliver positive and measurable impact with the main focus on youth and community development.

Striding Together: Khulisa Walk Towards Social Change in Northern Cape

By Varuscha Shearer

Danielskuil

Various NPO's during a two day workshop conducted by Khulisa in Danielskuil

Nestled within the core of Tsantsabane and Kgatelopele, homing in on the vibrant communities of Postmasburg and Danielskuil, Khulisa Social Solutions has embarked on a proactive journey to combat social challenges through its ground-breaking Transect Walk Training. This transformative initiative goes beyond the simple act of putting one foot in front of the other; it symbolizes a dynamic leap towards uplifting community well-being.

The Transect Walk Training by Khulisa is a holistic approach to tackling social challenges that plague the region. The program aims to empower individuals and communities by imparting essential life skills, promoting physical well-being and fostering a sense of community cohesion. Through a combination of running and walking, participants not only improve their fitness levels but also gain valuable insights into community development, communication, and collaboration.

Tsantsabane and Kgatelopele, like many regions, face various social issues such as unemployment, substance abuse, and lack of community engagement. Khulisa's program is designed to address these issues at their roots. By providing training that goes beyond physical activity, participants are equipped with the tools needed to initiate positive change within their communities. Studies conducted by the team show that the average age of youth falling into drug abuse in these regions currently stand at age 9.

Community members engaging in the Transect Walk Training find themselves part of a larger movement towards social upliftment. The program encourages dialogue, collaboration, and the sharing of experiences, creating a supportive network that extends beyond the training sessions. This communal approach is integral to Khulisa's strategy, recognizing that sustainable change arises from empowered and connected communities.

Moreover, the program extends its impact beyond individuals to non-governmental organizations (NGOs) in the region. By collaborating with local NGOs, Khulisa ensures that the ripple effect of positive change is amplified. NGOs play a crucial role in addressing specific social issues, and the Transect Walk Training serves as a complementary tool to enhance their capabilities. The beauty of Khulisa's initiative lies not only in its immediate impact on physical fitness and well-being but in its potential to alleviate the deeper-rooted social challenges faced by Tsantsabane and Kgatelopele. By empowering individuals with the skills and mindset needed for community development, Khulisa is sowing the seeds of lasting positive change.

As the Transect Walk Training gains momentum, it becomes a beacon of hope for the region, illuminating that transformation is possible through collective effort and community-driven initiatives. Khulisa Social Solutions is not just facilitating a healthier lifestyle; it is orchestrating a symphony of empowerment, collaboration, and resilience that resonates through the broader communities of Tsantsabane and Kgatelopele respectively.

The Transect Walk Training stands as a testament to Khulisa's commitment to alleviating social ills and fostering a brighter, more empowered future for all.

HARNESSING DATA FOR EFFECTIVE SYSTEMIC ENGAGEMENT

A CASE STUDY ON FAMILY DYNAMICS AND CHALLENGES

Khulisa is committed to utilizing robust data management systems to ensure that all our interventions are impactful, relevant, and evidence based. By harnessing the power of data, Khulisa has built a comprehensive understanding of the socio-emotional landscapes within various communities. This data is not merely collected; it is rigorously analyzed by our dedicated research team, who provide continuous feedback on all findings. This emphasis on data management ensures that our work remains responsive and adaptable to the ever-changing needs of the communities we serve.

Understanding the dynamics and challenges faced by families

To understand the dynamics and challenges faced by families and identify critical areas where systemic engagement between children and parents is needed, we conducted extensive research this year, when we facilitated 19 workshops with 5,338 participants, analyzed self-assessments from approximately 15,000 children since mid-2019, and organized 257 dialogue circles involving 2,833 participants from August 2022. These efforts have provided invaluable insights into family dynamics, enabling our research team to offer ongoing feedback that enhances our staff's ability to deliver effective programs. This approach also ensures that our community partners receive targeted, relevant interventions and provides our donors with transparent, data-driven evidence of their contributions' impact.

Below, we provide an overview of the need for systemic engagement, the critical issues identified in our research, and a summary of the tailored interventions Khulisa is exploring to address these needs.

The Importance of Systemic Engagement

Systemic engagement between children and parents is crucial for fostering healthy relationships, emotional well-being, and positive developmental outcomes. When parents are consistently and actively involved in their children's lives, it builds a foundation of trust, emotional stability, and effective communication. This engagement allows parents to better understand their children's needs, leading to more supportive and guided development that reduces the risk of negative behaviours and promotes resilience. Furthermore, systemic engagement contributes to academic success and social development, as children thrive when their parents are involved in their education and extracurricular activities. Strong parent-child relationships also strengthen the broader community by fostering more cohesive, resilient environments better equipped to address social challenges.

WHY THIS IS A CRITICAL ISSUE: INSIGHTS FROM KHULISA'S DATA

Khulisa's comprehensive data collection efforts have revealed several critical areas where systemic engagement is needed:

1. High Levels of Family Disintegration

Our work in various communities highlights a recurring theme of family breakdown, often due to economic hardships, social issues, or other stressors. This disintegration typically results in a lack of consistent engagement between parents and children, negatively impacting children's development and well-being.

2. Cycle of Violence and Crime

The data indicates a clear correlation between a lack of parental engagement and higher incidences of youth crime and violence. Without a supportive home environment, children are more susceptible to negative influences and peer pressure.

3. Gaps in Parenting Skills

Many communities face significant gaps in effective parenting skills. When parents lack the tools to engage with their children –due to trauma, lack of knowledge, or social constraints– the risk of perpetuating cycles of dysfunction increases.

4. Need for Interventions

Our field experience shows that programs focused on strengthening family bonds and enhancing parental engagement can yield positive outcomes. Interventions that promote systemic engagement help break cycles of poverty, crime, and social exclusion by equipping parents and children with the skills to communicate effectively, manage conflicts, and build supportive relationships.

Interventions to Address the Identified Needs

To address the critical issues identified in our research, Khulisa has developed and is exploring several targeted interventions aimed at strengthening family bonds, enhancing communication skills, and building community resilience. These interventions include parent-child communication programs that promote effective dialogue and emotional intelligence, family therapy sessions to help resolve conflicts and heal from trauma, and community support systems that establish networks for peer support, mentorship, and resource sharing. Additionally, we are integrating digital engagement tools to help families navigate online safety, positive digital communication, and the challenges of digital parenting. By leveraging data-driven insights, these interventions are tailored to meet the specific needs of the communities we serve, fostering systemic engagement and empowering families.

By leveraging data-driven insights, these interventions are tailored to meet the specific needs of the communities

Conclusion

Systemic engagement is vital for building and empowering families to tackle the complex challenges affecting children's development, family cohesion, and community resilience.

Khulisa's extensive research and fieldwork underscore the importance of fostering strong, consistent interactions between parents and children, enhancing emotional and psychological well-being, and contributing to positive behavioural outcomes and academic success.

Grounded in robust data management and evidence-based strategies, Khulisa is committed to creating sustainable change. Our approach empowers families to build healthier relationships and promotes positive development, ultimately contributing to stronger, more resilient communities. The long-term impact of such engagement extends beyond the family unit, fostering social cohesion and addressing broader societal issues, thereby creating a more supportive and nurturing environment for all.

TWO DECADES OF LOYAL SERVICE

AN INTERVIEW WITH OBED ZULU FROM OUR SHARED SERVICES CENTRE

Obed was first introduced to Khulisa by its Company Secretary with whom he used to work some twenty-five years ago. Obed joined Khulisa (over 20 years ago) as a driver for the organization.

Obed recalls that Khulisa was a very small organization at the time and shares some of his memories of being part of Khulisa's growth into the organization it is today:

One of my fondest memories was a team-building exercise we did in the Drakensberg. It taught me a lot about effective communication with different types of people. That experience was truly eye-opening for me.

I also remember the pride I felt when Khulisa celebrated its 20th anniversary, knowing I had been part of that journey.It was inspiring to see some of our ex-colleagues, who started with us, rise to create their own NGOs, taking with them the lessons they learned here.

You've worked with many people over the years. Who are some of the colleagues or leaders who have had a significant impact on you, and how did they influence your time at Khulisa?

Angie Swartz, who was Les' previous PA, stands out. We had a very special bond, and she was always supportive.The late Clement Mhlekwa, who introduced me to IT and computers, opened up a whole new world of skills for me.

Thami Nxumalo, an ex-Khulisa director, was like a father figure to me. He taught me the values of discipline and integrity in the workplace. Donna McCartney, another ex-Khulisa colleague, our ex HR Manager, helped me understand work etiquette and professionalism.

Obed Zulu ▲

What changes have you witnessed in Khulisa over the past two decades? How has the organization evolved in terms of its culture, operations, or mission?

I've seen Khulisa grow significantly in terms of size and impact. The organization's culture has evolved, and while there have been many positive changes, it saddens me to see some newer employees and volunteers are lacking the passion for Khulisa's mission.

How has your role as a driver and general admin assistant in admin changed or grown since you first started? What skills or experiences have you gained along the way?

My role has evolved significantly. I've taken courses on computer skills, NetStar Tracking, basic first aid, and firefighting. Now, I am a fleet manager, which involves more responsibility, like communicating effectively with stakeholders. This was something I never imagined I'd be doing when I first started.

Can you share a story about a challenging time you faced while working at Khulisa and how you overcame it?

I faced verbal abuse from an ex-colleague, which was difficult. However, with the support and good relationship I have with Lesley Ann, we were able to resolve the situation calmly and professionally.

I also faced a challenge when I was denied a Khulisa email address for years because of my role as a driver. It was frustrating, but I persevered and eventually got it after some internal changes.

What does Khulisa mean to you personally? How has your work here impacted your life outside of the organization?

Khulisa is like a second home to me. The organization has allowed me to grow both personally and professionally. I appreciate that management always goes the extra mile to help, whether it's a work issue or something personal.

In your opinion, what sets Khulisa apart from other organizations? What makes it a unique place to work?

Khulisa's commitment to personal growth and learning is exceptional. You meet new people every week and always can learn something new. It's a place where everyone is given the chance to grow.

Looking back, how do you feel about the contributions you've made to Khulisa? What are you most proud of in your 20-year career with the organization?

I feel proud to have been a part of Khulisa for over 20 years, sharing in all its milestones and growth. I've contributed by staying dedicated and helping the organization reach where it is today.

What advice would you give to someone just starting their journey at Khulisa, based on your extensive experience here?

My advice would be to focus, learn about the organization, and be genuinely passionate about Khulisa's mission. Challenges will always be there, but with dedication, they can be overcome.
